

Colour scales are per panel: the target is the q75 of each area's own distribution, so absolute levels are not comparable between areas.